Randal G. Winter Construction
24257 San Fernando Road
Newhall, CA 91321

To all considering a remodel,

If you're like my wife and myself, we were concerned about allowing some flaky hack of a contractor in our house to build the addition to our dining room. We were worried that he and his men would have their way with our house, possessions and pets while we were at work, hopefully making enough money to cover all the surprise "up charges" that we knew enough to expect.

We would like to ease your worries by whole-heartedly recommending Randal G. Winter Construction and his crews for your project.

My wife is a professional interior designer and I studied architecture and worked for years as a licensed stone and tile contractor. This combination makes us tough customers for any contractor. With a very critical eye and attention to details, we knew we needed a special contractor that could catch our vision and execute our remodel with the quality and seamless look we wanted.

I am happy to say that Randal and his crews came through with flying colors. Randal, his staff and all of his subcontractors were all very friendly, professional, and respectful (of us, our family and our property). They showed up as scheduled and on time, cleaned up after themselves, easily adjusted to minor changes as they came up and were simply a pleasure to work with. To top it off, the only up charges we had were those few items that we added to the job!

We would highly recommend Randal Winter Construction. His prices are fair and his quality is superb. His experience and hands-on approach brings confidence to what so often can become a stressful process. We wouldn't consider hiring anyone else for any future work that we may do to our home, and we have already referred him to all of our friends.

Sincerely,

Robert Dunlap
